

for three days washing dishes.

THE COURT: What did they put you in jail for?

DEFENDANT McCARTHY: I didnt have any place to sleep.

THE COURT: Where were you in jail again?

DEFENDANT McCARTHY: Colton.

THE COURT: Where is that?

DEFENDANT McCARTHY: Eighty miles out of Los Angeles.

THE COURT: What were you doing there?

DEFENDANT McCARTHY: A few fellows and myself were down in the jungles, but nobody was allowed--

THE COURT: Where is that?

DEFENDANT McCARTHY: Dont you know what that is. Tramps and so on sleep there, but they didnt allow anybody in there, and we went down there and went to sleep, we were tired, and they took us up to jail and left us in jail over night. They asked me if I would work, and I told them yes, and I got a job in a restaurant washing dishes.

THE COURT: You are what we call a globe trotter?

DEFENDANT McCARTHY: My trade is electricity.

THE COURT: How long did you go to school?

DEFENDANT McCARTHY: I started when I was six, until 1914.

THE COURT: What grades did you finish?

DEFENDANT McCARTHY: I went through the eighth grade.

THE COURT: Did you finish the eighth grade?

DEFENDANT McCARTHY: No, sir.

THE COURT: Do you have any ambition in life?

DEFENDANT McCARTHY: Certainly.

THE COURT: What is your ambition?

DEFENDANT McCARTHY: I would like to become an electrician.

THE COURT: Is this a good way to become an electrician?

DEFENDANT McCARTHY: If you have no money and become hungry--

THE COURT: You could not get work down to Los Angeles?

DEFENDANT McCARTHY: No, sir.

THE COURT: Not as a helper?
