

Q You haven't anybody dependent upon you, have you?

A No sir.

Q Wasn't it possible for you to make a living?

A It was if I wanted to go down here and be a scab on my fellow workmen, yes; but I wouldn't do it.

Q You would rather commit burglary than be a scab?

A Yes, I would rather be in the penitentiary than to know I was a dirty scab for the syndicates and scab-harders of the State of Utah.

Q Do you feel you can look everybody in the face after committing burglary?

A Yes sir, and come out of the penitentiary--

Q Does it occur to you there is anything wrong?

A I don't know that I have committed any worse crime than a lot you have sent up there.

Q Do you feel there is nothing wrong about committing burglary?

A We know anything you do is wrong, your Honor; anything we commit in the crime line is wrong, we know that.

Q Well, do you feel now that you are much of a man after having been charged with burglary and admitting it?

A Sir?

Q Do you consider you are much of a man after having done that?

A I may consider I am as much of a man and more than if I went down and scabbed on a man; if that is the way you want to pronounce it.

Q Wasn't there any way to make a living?

A Perhaps I could have got a shot gun and held up a bank.

Q Are you in the habit of doing that?

A No sir.

Q Have you ever done that?

A. No sir.
