

Of course there was nobody present to see that; but this man, after being in jail three days, said if the Sheriff would go with him he would go and get the goods. He went and got a valise of ladies' linen, tea-cups and saucers, and a lot of things, probably thirty dollars worth. There was other things taken from the place at that time; and this man was once arrested before for entering the same premises, but the lady did not care to prosecute, and there was nothing done about it; but in view, your Honor, of the fact that he has offered to plead guilty, <sup>we</sup> we felt like that/would be justified in accepting the plea; but I believe under the circumstances that we would be entitled to ask for the maximum punishment in this case.
