

him make good - as I know he will. Will you, in judging him, remember that his punishment is mine, tenfold, and that in granting him another chance you will be giving an innocent wife her chance of future happiness?

For my people's sake I have kept this trouble secret here, and I beg you not to make it public here in any way. We have been here nearly twenty years and to have this uncovered would be a hard blow to my parents.

Thanking you for any consideration and praying that you will grant parole at least,
I am,

Respectfully,

Mrs. R. O. Underwood.
