to a woman's heart, and I would think she would have taken them with her. One thing in particular when he married me he gave me a ladies gold watch. It was a good one but I could see it was not new and it was an old style. I asked him if he cared if I sent it back and he exchanged it for a later style watch and he got very mad and said I did not appreciate a nice present so I said nothing more but later on out in Rawlins Wyo. I met this woman who knew his other wife and I showed her the watch and she recognized it and said it had belonged to his other wife and that Hartzell had not even bought the watch for her that she had bought it and paid for it herself before she married him so I would think she would have taken it when she left him as he claims. As I said before I would put nothing past this man and her disappearance should be looked into. How can it be done? I don't know if it is proper to address you but I thought maybe so as he was connected in your state.
