

THE COURT: I don't want you to be frivolous about this, you don't mean to say if you couldn't find work you would take something?

DEFENDANT BAXTER: Why, I never said that.

THE COURT: What are your ideas, anyway.

DEFENDANT BAXTER: Well, I don't know, I never done much thinking.

THE COURT: Mr. Baxter, I know that the boys who went across the water and saw hard service get some queer ideas, many of them. It is not strange to me that they do. I can see how that kind of a life over there embittered them, and they get some queer ideas. Do you realize the difference between right and wrong?

DEFENDANT BAXTER: Certainly.

THE COURT: You know when you do wrong.

DEFENDANT BAXTER: Yes, sir.

THE COURT: You know when you do right?

DEFENDANT BAXTER: Yes, sir.

THE COURT: You are not a bad looking man Baxter. I don't believe there is any necessity for your doing wrong at all. That is all, you may sit down.

This is Mr. Anderson?

DEFENDANT ANDERSON: Yes, sir.

THE COURT: Where were you born, Mr. Anderson?

DEFENDANT ANDERSON: I don't know, the last I remember I was in Texas.

THE COURT: How old were you when you left Texas?

DEFENDANT ANDERSON: I left Texas some time about four or five years ago.
